PREFACE

After many years of preparation the class of 1911 is now about to make its debut upon the stage of life. During the last four years it has passed through the various phases of undergraduate life, friends have been made, college honors have been won, and, we hope, honest preparation has been acquired for the greater struggle which is before us. Of this, then, the present volume treats, of the twenty years or more which each man has spent in preparation, and it remains for future records of the class to show to what purposes this training has been put and what measure of success has crowned our efforts.

New Haven, May first.

IN FRESHMAN YEAR

FRESHMAN YEAR

For two or three days preceding September 25th, 1907, New Haven was in a state of invasion by a strange, unkempt horde of disciples of learning from all parts of the civilized world, in whose gigantic intellects and hearts of oak lay dormant potentialities which one day would make Yale proud and exultant over that immortal class of 1911. Fresh from the shaken-off apron strings of preparatory pedagogues, and eager to imbibe deeply of the Pierian Spring, they came, 311 strong, confident of blazoning on Yale's roll of honor a glorious memorial of their deeds and misdeeds.

York Street it was that swallowed up this heterogeneous mass of future poets, journalists, athletes, Dwight Hall devotees, orators, politicians, etc. Some haughtily claimed for their abode the princely mansions of Garland, while others of humbler tastes, sought refuge in the abysmal gloom of the Pierson Inferno or the Wrexham Purgatorio.

But the night before college opened, we all alike experienced the unforgettable thrill and exultation with which we joined in that maddening, torchlight march from Osborn Hall through the classic streets of New Haven to the wrestling matches on the Campus.

These Titanic struggles, which took place in a ring encircled by row upon row of excited, derisive, and sympathetic classmates and upper classmen, called forth the ablest gladiatorial talent from both our ranks and those of the Sophomores. The college walls even now faintly re-echo the wild pæans of conquest with which our triumphant class rent the startled, tobacco-ridden air, when victory folded her airy pinions and alighted on our standards. Bartlett won over Sweeney; and although Livingston lost to Bradley, the mettle of 1911 when first tried was not found wanting, when Bill Prime overthrew Roberts in the final bout. In this victory the class of 1911 had taken the first step in its triumphant march toward the exalted position it later occupied in the college world.

Then followed that "dim, weird battle" between our cohorts and the elusive and visionary Sophomoric foe which raged in a tumultuous torrent through York and down Chapel, in which Freshman slew Freshman, not knowing whom he slew. In the confusion, many an ingenuous and unfortunate Freshman was surreptitiously snatched away to Billy's where he experienced for the first time the indefinable ecstasy of a beer shampoo. Other poor flies were lured to dreadful, Sophomoric webs on Crown Street, where their puerile efforts to amuse were gloated over by their foes. Until early in the morning, the affrighted inhabitants of York Street were serenaded by the musical strains of "Wake, Freshman, wake!" and "Oh, Fresh, put out that light!"

After the impressive reception at Dwight Hall a few days later, the good results of the inspiring speeches made there by the leaders in the various college activities were manifest in the enthusiastic manner in which our class entered into the different extra-curriculum interests. Each Freshman considered it his particular duty to serve the University in some way or another, from captaining the football team to chastising Mr. G—— and maintaining a regular attendance at daily chapel.

The first call for candidates for the Freshman football team was generously responded to by about eighty-five men. However, many are called but few are chosen, and by the process of natural selection a team was formed which included nine men from our class: Kilpatrick, Captain; Mersereau, Hyde, Morris, W. R. Wheeler, Church, Deming, Van Sinderen, and Mason. With Tom Marshall, 1908, as coach, the team had a highly successful season, defeating Andover twice, Exeter once, and winning both championship games from Princeton and Harvard.

It was not long before the class of 1911 conclusively demonstrated that it had little sympathy with a sedentary and sluggish existence. On the night of October 4th, that indefinable wanderlust and spirit of adventure stirred up their young blood, and a large number of the class, ably assisted by some fellow-desperadoes from Sheff., started out to give the unsuspecting town of New Haven a generous coating of vermillion. The first point of attack was that venerable Temple Street railroad bridge, which blazed up in a beautiful conflagration. But this only served to whet the bloodthirsty appetites of the Freshmen, and on they swept to storm Poli's—that sink of iniquity, leaving havoc and dismantled policemen in their wake. After having treated the infuriated Mr. Poli to a gratuitous ride up and down Church Street on their stalwart shoulders, the "café l'enfant" was besieged.

FRESHMAN BASEBALL TEAM

The storming of the Bastile paled into insignificance beside this awe-inspiring spectacle of terrified waitresses fleeing for their lives, Boston baked beans and griddle cakes hurtling thro' the air, and ultimate capitulation. Dignified and conservative as we are now as Seniors, it seems almost impossible that we ever took part in such digressions from the straight and narrow path. As grave and dignified Seniors with the weight of the Universe on our shoulders, it now seems almost unbelievable that we should ever have indulged in these mad and reckless pranks with which we were wont in the innocence of our hearts to lessen the monotony of Freshman year.

The Xmas exams. came and went—and so did a few of our weaker brethren, who proved easy victims to the “sword that knoweth no pity,” of such bugbears as Mathematics and Chemistry. During the vacation we regaled our proud families with awful tales of our escapades in New Haven, and of how some of the Freshman faculty dared no longer to venture on York Street without a special bodyguard. With what pride and pity did we behold the havoc we wrought with our new-found college airs and graces among the impressionable fair sex!

FRESHMAN TRACK TEAM

On our return after the joys of vacation we were given a hearty welcome by "Toot" Farr and Kligerman, and our other spiritual and temporal advisers. The spirit of work seized hold of us and we plunged madly into such excesses as news heeling, warbling on the Freshman Glee Club, fascinating our Profs. by original if not brilliant recitations, etc.

The competition for the "oldest college daily" was well under way by this time, and hot was the pursuit by our cadaverous and emaciated classmates, mounted on decrepit and antediluvian bicycles, after the elusive log and much-to-be-desired scoop. They led a strange life—these news heelers—little seen in our familiar haunts, they flitted to and fro like wan and emaciated spectres on their decrepit bicycles, disregarding nature's demands for sleep or food in their tireless quest of news. Finally, by the end of the second competition in June, Randolph, Hollister, Gammell, Gibney, and Rex Wheeler were elected editors; the last three eventually became the officers of the 1911 board.

The quality of the Lit. was greatly enhanced by occasional contributions from such budding geniuses as Tom Beer, Neal Lombardi, Roy Wheeler, and Bayard Rives. The unique style of the first named littérateur attracted wide-spread interest for its daring originality and mystic symbolism; in fact, it was rumored that he was of the cult of Henry James.

Prom. week, with its alluring and forbidden joys, gave us the opportunity for a splendid outburst of whimsical, though unappreciated, wit. To 1911 belongs the proud distinction of having been the last class to enjoy that traditional Freshman privilege of being a prominent feature of the Prom. Concert. We do not say that it was due to our behavior on that memorable night that this feature of Prom. week was thereafter abolished, for who can maliciously assert that we did not make the most strenuous and ingenious efforts on that occasion to furnish amusement to the fair guests? How bored they would have been if we had not lowered from the gallery such touching expressions of our admiration as mice, alarm clocks, pussy cats, papier-maché lobsters, etc.? Many a lovely maiden's heart was thrilled by the highly poetical notes we sent down, such as "The Freshman Class is up above, gazing down with looks of love—Oh! starry eyes, look and shine, forget that dub from 1909." And when the manager rang down the curtain by orders of the Fire Marshal, who could have regretted it more than ourselves?

The Fence Rush on Washington's Birthday was won by the Freshmen for the first time within the writer's recollection, even against such giants as Coy and Cooney. Many of us still have the gory trophies of the victory, the high hats and canes, in our rooms, and they often inspire us to fond "reminiscences" over that happy day. The following morning it was described in one of the New Haven journals as follows: "All bloodless lay the trodden snow, And dark as winter was the flow Of Weiser running rapidly."

That notable band of would-be Carusos and owners of dress suits called the Freshman Glee Club was organized with Seymour Blair as leader and Joe Horne as manager. When the latter found his duties so exacting and arduous that he was obliged to take a European Tour to recuperate, John Dempsey was elected his successor. This gallant troupe of choristers gave its happily inimitable entertainments at many church socials and sewing-circle functions in and about New Haven, not to mention female cemeteries here and there. But it never succeeded in living down the black eye it received when Rex Wheeler horrified some prim old Puritan ladies at one of these aforesaid church socials by singing in his deep bass voice a rollicking drinking song, and dramatically entering into the spirit of it.

In histrionic lines our class soon showed its talent. The cast of "Revizor," presented by the Dramatic Association in April, included such famous Thespians as "Jap" Hartwell, "Monty" Wooley (then known as the "Count"), "Bill" Manice, and Johnny McDonnell. "Jap" has the proud reputation of being the only living graduate of Briarcliff who ever passed the Yale entrance examinations. The fame he won as a dashing soubrette in these plays has been viewed with envious eyes, even by Eva Tanguay, that most soubrettish of soubrettes. It was at this time that "Bill Manice," the Faversham of the Yale stage, established his reputation as the adored matinée idol of Prom. girls, Bridgeport "demireps," and Meriden suffragettes.

In these bright annals of the glorious deeds of the class of 1911, mention must in justice be made of our heroic abolition of that medieval custom of "Bottle Night." This quaint ceremony had long proved a harassing thorn in the side of the Faculty, and it having always been our generous wont to be an aid and pillar of that interesting body, we resolutely plucked out the said thorn; not, however, without a great deal of pain and discomfiture to the party concerned. For Bottle Night did not disappear quietly and without a murmur as doth a creamy Bock down the parched throat of a Moryite; nay, it went to the musical accompaniment of broken bottles, shattered glass, pistol reports, and agonized shrieks for mercy from Mr. Garland. Never did that despot of York Street fear for his life so much as he did on that night when he was carried forth into the middle of the street on the shoulders of "Kil" and other stalwart athletes, and made to publicly repent for past sins and clandestine communication with the Freshman Faculty.

When the Easter vacation came, most of the class scattered to their respective domiciles; some, however, worn out with the fatigue of hard study, went to Atlantic City to drink in the invigorating sea-breezes, while others patronized the balmy climate and seductive attractions of Bermuda.

The Spring term—the most enjoyable and fleeting term in the whole year—found us taking an active part in the various interests which assume paramount importance at this time of year. We found so much to attract us in this fascinating term that we could scarce decide what to devote our boundless energies to. Should it be to pull manfully at an oar (or catch a crab) in a shell down in the harbor? Or join that immortal band of Barney Reilly's "peerless balltossers"? Or board a trolley car for Savin Rock, there to plunge into the ecstatic whirl of "Roller Bollers" and "ticklers"? Some of us found amusement in such naive pranks as taking that strolling troupe of Teutonic musicians over to Tuttle's where they were generously filled up with ale, and then conducted in front of Garland's where they made night hideous and sleep a mockery.

We came to be proud of our baseball team which established a very commendable record for the season. People came from miles around to see them play, merely for the sake of the unique spectacle of "Pop" Corey's sliding to second. The following men from our class played on the team: Badger, Corey, Deming, Mosser, Freeman, Taylor, Daly, and "Juddy" Hartwell. The Princeton Freshmen were defeated 6 to 2. The first game with Harvard resulted in an extra inning tie, while we lost the second in Cambridge by a score of 4 to 2.

The track team won from Harvard, but was defeated by Princeton. Our class was represented on the track team by Kilpatrick, Peabody, Bushnell, F. R. Mason, and Randolph.

The Freshman crew shared in the general catastrophe at Gales Ferry in the annual races against Harvard, and lost both the four-oar and eight-oar events. It hardly seems possible that we could have lost these races with such eminent bladesmen on the Freshman crews as Livingston, Frost, Jeffery, Patterson, Van Blarcom, Davis, Bogue, and Colburn; but "the race is not always to the swift."

During exam. week, Carroll Hincks received for us in a burning and impassioned oration the time-honored gift of the Yale fence. After the English examinations, always the last on the calendar, we emerged from the Stygian gloom of Alumni into the bright June sunlight, with pipes in our mouths and trying to look as Sophomoric as possible. In the bright vision we then had of the joys and privileges of Sophomore year, we little realized that in time to come our thoughts would turn back to Freshman year with a greater and more sympathetic appreciation of what that part of our college year really meant to us. For it was in these care-free hours of pleasure and unconscious development that were born those ties and associations that were to be to us in the future the most precious of all of Yale's gifts—friendships.

SOPHOMORE YEAR

When you come to think it over, our class has seen, or will have seen, the finish of an unusually large number of things. Customs have changed; institutions been abolished; officials obliterated; and familiar places are no more. We have witnessed the retirement of a Dean, and that too, of a Dean unparalleled in the history of Yale in the possession of the love and esteem of all the generations of men over whom he has sat in judgment. We have seen the death of the Old Rules, and revelled in the abolition of flowers at the Prom. It is due largely to our tremendous and progressive influence that elections of all sorts have undergone so complete a revolution; and nothing short of our triumphant sobriety could ever have affected the suppression of the Prom. Concert rough-house. From the annihilation of Bottle Night to the ultimate destruction of Gus's (or, as less familiarly known, the New Haven House) our history has comprehended more termini than that of any previous class. And yet, I warrant, never were there such an epoch-making finale as that of the Hutchinsons.

It has been pretty generally concluded that it is for far the best interests of the greater Yale that as many as possible of her sons should accumulate in and around the Campus. This proof has been demonstrated by such expert authority that it would be useless to argue. And yet I believe in the inmost hearts of many of us there lurks a real regret for the old days when as an undivided unit our class centered around the traditional corner, and there abode in ease, comfort and grateful freedom. Ours was the last class to live there as a whole. No doubt the ultimate effect of the change will prove beneficent; yet surely the far-sighted ones will allow those of us who are still subject to occasional qualms of sentimentalism to dwell with a little pleasure, a little pain on the remembrance of a locality, once famous in Yale, now doomed to desolation—a derelict in an angry sea of Progress.

* * * * *

It is not insignificant that during the first night's celebrations, all three of the wrestling bouts with the newly-fledged Freshmen were won by us. Against the brawn and brains of such champions as Prime, Cleveland, and Walker there was no prevailing. Thus auspiciously did we set forth on our gay career.

With what pride, with what a sense of self-importance did we first enter Mory's hallowed portals and take our seats within its enchanted precincts! At last we were at home in the forbidden land. From henceforth it was to be a sacred trust; a legacy for us to pass on to the youngsters with fitting reminiscences. Mory's was no longer a legend; we were now truly initiated in the mystery of fast and loose living. Thoroughly experienced libertines, we could now in our turn talk vaguely to Freshmen of the nights spent there in revelry and hint of the awful things we had seen. Mory's! From that time to this thou hast witnessed many happy hours, when we, the bloom of our youth yet not utterly parched, have entered into thy spirit and joined our voices in joyous song. Let us not grow old too soon! Thus preacheth Mory's, and the value of her lesson is untold. Unhappy Yale when it shall sing thy requiem.

It soon became apparent that we were to be needed in the larger world of politics and athletics. Our bravest sons were called to the gridiron; and we, with true Spartan constancy, sent them forth, exhorting them with many vigorous bon mots such as—"Bring back the ball, or be forever bawled out!" "None save the valorous merit the comely" etc., etc. Urged on by our hilarity, then, quickly developed such extraordinary luminaries as Daly, Kilpatrick, Field, Corey, Hyde, and Morris. But a great misfortune occurred. Kil, on whom hung prodigious hopes, was injured and was out of the game during the most important part of the season. Not without reason may we attribute in some degree the fearful outcome of the Harvard game to this disaster.

Taft was elected President! Can one ever forget the wild excitement, the agonized activity of the Taft Club! The roars of defiance from the Bryan Clubs! And then, the parade and the fire-works. Yale's first President! With what unutterable scorn must we have been viewed by Harvard—austere home of twenty-seven Presidents and twelve Vice-Presidents!

During the fall term several important elections took place. First, the deacons: Day, Hyde, Van Sinderen, and L. R. Wheeler. Also the Sophomore German Committee: Corey, Chairman; Blair, Floor Manager; Davis, Hyde, and Randolph. Carroll Hincks was elected Assistant Manager of Football.

It was at this time that the Wigwam-Wrangler Debating Societies were organized. They were composed of a few of those who could debate, but mostly of those who couldn't. The real interest lay perhaps rather in the development of a latent sense of humor than in the training of a disciplined corps of veteran disputants. However each result has its value, and no doubt the clubs justified their existence.

In accordance with our professed love of Art, we resolved to take part in the celebration of a certain famous musician's birth (or death); and so, having gotten together all the talent in the class—a not inconsiderable amount—we formed into a band; and, after a cursory practice, paraded the town in all good faith and with the best intentions in the world. What was our mortification to discover that we had been misunderstood, that our efforts were unappreciated. In the awful disappointment of the moment, we gave way to the bitterest pessimism. So died the Hutch Band. So also perished our belief in the artist world. We awoke to sordid realism and the gloom of an opaque conservatism.

Our representation on the Christmas trips was considerable. Hyde, Blair, Le Blanc, and Landon went with the Musical Clubs; Hartwell, Manice, Gammell, Rives, Hickox, and Woolley, with the Dramatic Association.

Literature fairly blossomed under our onslaughts. Beer continued to shriek unintelligibly at us through the columns of the Lit., while Lombardi mystified us with quaint symbolism. We undoubtedly possessed great genius. It manifested itself at odd intervals all through the year.

In nothing was our superiority so conspicuous as in the achievements of our resplendent Class Crew. Twice did we demonstrate how useless it was to cope with our strength. From both regattas, Spring and Fall, we emerged crowned with success, the championship securely possessed. Livingston captained the crew, and report hath it there lives not, nor ever lived, a better oar.

In the course of the Spring many important elections were held. John McDonnell was elected Assistant Manager of Baseball; F. F. Randolph, of Crew; and Leslie Soule, of Track; Moreover, the Freshman Managers for next year: L. R. Wheeler, M. Robinson, J. T. Rowland, and W. H. Mills. The News took decided pleasure in announcing the election of R. C. Walker, A. Hubbard, and J. M. Holcombe, Jr. to its board of editors. And later in the spring the Board was organized with Gammell as Chairman, Gibney as Business Manager, and W. R. Wheeler as Assignment Editor.

* * * * *

Who is there could set a limit to my wanderings? Were I to retail events, where should I end? The Prom.—with its inevitable accompaniment of sentiment and sensation, tumult and distraction—all the hot blaze of our social pyrotechnics—may I dilate on such a subject? Neither space nor time permits. Then the Cane Rush on Washington's Birthday, when we eradicated the Freshmen, only to have the judges, in accordance with a time-honored precedent, award them the victory. Shall I tell of the part we took in the revival of the Omega Lambda Chi? Or dwell on the marvelous exploits of our great athlete, Kilpatrick, winning one event after another all through the season? Shall I recount the triumph of our championship Baseball Team? Or bewail the sad lot of our unfortunate Navy? Oh, when I think how much must be passed over in silence, I curse the power that set a limit to this history. I could fill reams—but then, what good? The record of our doings need not be preserved—they dwell in our minds and will be transmitted down through the ages by the tales of our posterity.

On June 21st our Fence Orator intrusted the guardianship of the Fence to the Class of 1912. Thus officially closed our second year. In reality it was the last year of our untroubled youth. In the years to come we were to have cares and responsibilities—we were to grow up. As Sophomores we were boys together for the last time.

MONTILLION WOOLLEY.

JUNIOR YEAR

"1913 Juvenes, 1911 Juniores."

This is a saying that might appropriately enough, and in more senses than one, have been applied to the opening of Junior year. For if our new-fledged Freshmen were green, our budding Juniors were greener. The first night was indeed "a momentious event," in the words of the immortal Artemus Ward, and Mory's kept open until "the whiching hour of nite, when sheated joasts come gibbering from the graive." Pop Warner shook his sagacious cocoa-nut in surprise, and Jim Donnelly himself was forced to confess that not even the class of eighteen 'steen had ever carried on such high (or perhaps they were low) jinks under ye old elms. Possibly it was because we had come to our own at last! At last we could claim a paternal interest in the softly Grecian outlines of Fayerweather or of the newer Houghton Hall, and now at least, we could bask in the verdant Paradise of the Oval. Ah, sweet are the privileges of Junior year!—as the weary Junior gasped when he reached his room on the fifth floor of Berkeley.

The first official act of our Juniordom was the election of those nimble masters of the Terpsichorean art—the Junior Prom. Committee. Ah, what a bunch was there, my classmates! Fritz Hyde, the chairman, had under him the trusty Joe Horne; Fred Daly, peer of athletes; Johnnie MacDonnell; Clint Davis; Fuzz Randolph; Seymour Blair; and our class skinny-man, Pop Corey. How nobly they toed the mark you shall hear later, but for the nonce, we "let that parse."

From our soubrette Jap Hartwell, to John R. Kilpatrick himself, we found that football made the autumn days fly past on the wings of the wind. It was a shame to take the scalps of Syracuse, Wesleyan, Holy Cross, and the others, but the team did it with something like the serenity of a sausage machine—and one by one the scalps were hung up to dry under Handsome Dan's watchful eye, until at last the eventful day of the Princeton game drew into sight again. Shall

THE ARMORY

I describe to you the throng of fair damsels and grave chaperones that capered forth from the Union Station on the morning of November 13th? Shall I enumerate the countless doubloons that were coined that day by Kirk and all his tribe of Jehus, or by Champion's flower shop for chrysanthemums and violets? No! Suffice it to say that never did blooming cheeks bloom redder, never did violets rejoice in a deeper violet, than at the field on that day of triumph. 17—0! There you have the story in a nut-shell, and in the 8—0 of a week later, you have a glorious sequel. Without once being scored on during the entire Fall, the team returned in glory to New Haven and mere studies. In the Princeton game, Daly, Kilpatrick, and Corey took part. In the combat with Harvard, Field, Daly and Kilpatrick represented our class. Daly was unanimously elected captain for next year, soon after the season closed.

JUNIOR PROMENADE COMMITTEE

We now began to settle down to the lesser interests of life, and in the lengthening twilight, Berkeley Oval began to gleam bright with the rays of student lamps—rays that brought joy to the hearts of Kligerman and of Leo Morris. And now the Soccer Team began to boot the sphere, Bill Prime's trilby getting in some telling work for Yale, while the Dramat and the Glee Clubs began rehearsals for their winter specialties. Strange and fearsome discords floated from the windows of Alumni, while the unwary Freshman who trusted himself to the vicinity of Osborn was startled by shrieks from the basement of "You coward, Percy de Mandeville, unhand my lover!" Manice, Woolley, and Miss Arthura Hartwell, represented our class among the Thespians in "London Assurance"; while those from 1911 who helped to make the night hideous were: LeBlanc, Brockway, Hyde, Stanley Williams, Shapleigh, David Baker, Crandall, Cliff Wright, and O'Brien.

And so, the term drew on with much studying and some play, until the Winter Exams. Here, as usual the class of 1911 distinguished itself mightily. But whether for excellence, or the reverse, I leave my readers to surmise. On Tuesday, December 22nd, the holidays officially began; and disbanding, some South, some North, some West—and some not disbanding at all—the class of 1911 departed to spread Christmas cheer over the face of the land.

The new year, academically speaking, began on January 6th, and primed with the good things of New Year's, the incomparable class of 1911 returned with "a heart for every fate." The nearest fate, however, was not a very serious one, for now we have come to the Prom.—I say "the" Prom. advisedly, for what Prom. before or after could ever compete with that of the class of 1911? Ah, how shall I describe the galaxy of Beauty that began to pour into New Haven on January 15th? Or how can mere words describe the brilliance of the audience that thronged the Prom. performance of "London Assurance" on Saturday, and the Glee Club concert on Monday? Come to the aid of my faltering pen, O ye Muses—for without your aid I am lost! From festivity to festivity the spirit of revelry grew apace, and were it not for the Prom. itself, I should be tempted to crown the week's rejoicings with the Junior German. Under Fuzz Randolph's generalship, the German in Woolsey Hall lasted until the wee hours of the morning, and as we departed in the cold dusk before dawn, it seemed that even the great event itself could not be more of a success.

But, if we thought so, we counted without our Prom. Committee! When, at 8.53 P. M. on Tuesday, the 2nd Regiment Band struck up in a spirited maestoso "See, Our Conquering Hero Comes," and Randolph, at the head of the performers, pranced proudly around the Armory floor, we knew that we were the candy kids. From that time on, all is enveloped in a halo of golden memory. Wilted shirt-fronts; melting collars; flying feet; couples madly twirling, swirling, and bumping; struggling masses before the stag-supper room—all melt into one blurred recollection, above which hover whispers of "You Boston just fine!" "I used to be able to Boston—once!" "D——!—? that man! that's the 'steenth time he's stepped on my tenderest toe!"—and so on, ad libitum. When did it end? I know not—it ended, however,—and all too soon.

But the winter contained other things besides the Prom., and the minor activities entered into full sway, with Z. Ross in Fencing; A. R. Wheeler, Prime, Livingston, and Cleveland in Wrestling; E. G. Clark, in Gymnastics; Hughes, Church, and Devan in Swimming. The Track Team, too, entered several indoor meets, and those to represent our class were: Bushnell, Kilpatrick, Merrill, Robinson, and Soule.

Serri was our only representative on the Debating Team, but the Eligibility List contained Kilbourn, Tsao, Kavanaugh, Holcombe, Dempsey, Hincks, and Foulkes.

But now a change was taking place in the state of Denmark. Already, officers in different organizations for Senior year were being elected. Fritz Hyde was made Leader of the Glee Club, and Francis Crandall of the Mandolin and Banjo Clubs. The Dramat. elected Woolley its President, with Jap Hartwell as Vice-President, and Rives, Secretary. Our Phi Beta Kappa members, after election, made Biff Wheeler their President, and Stan. Williams Vice-President, with Stanton, Secretary, and Shattuck, Treasurer.

Lombardi was made Chairman of the Lit., with Beer, Jimmie Wheeler, Malcolm Davis, and Cary Abbott as Associate Editors, and Soule, Managing Editor. The corresponding positions on the Courant were filled by Hunn, Larremore, Malcolm Davis, Ingersoll, and McAfee, with Harry Irons as Manager. Rodney Dean was elected Chairman of the Record; with Gay, Dimock, Prime, Ralph Jewell, Gibney, Cornish, and E. A. Waters as his minions.

Clint. Davis was elected Manager of the Glee Clubs, McAfee of the Dramat; Hincks had already been made Football Manager; and the Track, Crew, and Baseball Managers became Soule, Randolph, and MacDonnell respectively. Reed was Manager of Hockey, Jack Rowland of Basketball, and Dunn of Tennis.

About this time, too, the new Board of the new News went into office, and Gammell took upon his capable shoulders the position of Chairman, with Rex Wheeler as Assignment Editor, Allen Hubbard Managing Editor, Gibney Business Manager, Randolph, Hollister, Walker, and Holcombe Associate Editors.

And so, what with studies and extra-curriculum activities (in which Mory's, Poli's, and the Hyp. took not the smallest part), the winter term drew to its close.

March 30th saw us returning for a fresh start in our four years' race for a diploma. "March," as the proverb hath it, "goes out like a lamb"—but such was not our March's fate. With a long breath, and perhaps for some of us a strong breath, we plunged anew into the vortex, giving a tweak to March's tail as it vanished. Baseball, crew, and track, now absorbed all our interest, and already bands of devoted pilgrims began to chew the vernal peanut as they watched Buck Freeman twirl the sphere, or Pop Corey and Paul Badger pound the same into remote right and left gardens. I will not follow the varying fortunes of the Team—it did noble work, and when, at the end of the year, we had beaten Harvard, and Pop Corey was elected Captain, we felt proud both of the Team and the coming leader.

The Track Team, too, did yeoman service, leaving both Princeton and Harvard behind in the dual meets. Johnnie Kilpatrick distinguished himself here too, and richly deserved the Captaincy that he got later.

All this time the Crew was going through its unostentatious preparations. Frost, Van Sinderen, and Colburn, were rowing in the Varsity boat; while Low, Newman, Patterson, Van Blarcom, Bogue, and Copp, were also on the squad—the latter as coxswain. In the Spring Regatta, two crews of Juniors took part, and although they did not win, came in close seconds in each case. After the season had ended, Jack Frost was elected to the well-earned position of Crew Captain for the next year.

The Tennis Team too was upholding Yale's honor in the meanwhile with rare success. Under Captain Holden's able leadership, they carried everything before them, finishing up in a burst of glory by defeating Harvard 7—2.

But the Spring is the time when young men's fancies lightly turn to thoughts of—Savin Rock and other things! And as April and May fluttered by, the Yacht Club, Momauguin, and our other resorts of predilection, began to strike up a thriving trade. Some of our gilded youth raked forth stink-wagons from the scrap-heap, and disported themselves in the glory of their hearts. It was of them, I think, that the prophet Nahum spoke when he said: "Their chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings." Some of our more adventurous spirits, however, preferred the salt sea wave to chug over, and soon all of New Haven's tars came to know the two sturdy craft manned by 1911 crews that tintured the salt breezes of the bay.

But now we have almost done. All too soon the June exams came to an end, and another Commencement went by, with all its joyous festivities. Junior year, the year of many privileges with few responsibilities, had come to its close. And with a sigh for the happy, quick-fleeting days of irresponsibility, but a joyful expectation of approaching honor, we turned to put on the sober mantle of Senior-dom.

BAYARD RIVES.

THE "RECORD" BOARD

SENIOR YEAR

Each year—philosophically speaking—should be better than the preceding one. And, so far as one individual can reflect the views of a class, such has proved to be the case with the four successive years spent at Yale by the graduating class of 1911. The four years have been ascending steps, of which the last has been the best,—the most amusing as well as the most impressive, the most frivolous as well as the most serious, the most tranquil as well as the most exciting, and, to the majority, much the most interesting.

The members of 1911 began the year admirably. There is a certain serenity, tinged with a faint suggestion of languor, a certain cautious and collected dignity, which marks the most finished products of every Senior Class, and to which all aspire with varying success.

From the first day of college, from the earliest glimmer of the dawning Senior year, it was clear that 1911 possessed these qualities in a rare degree.

The Freshman-Sophomore "rush" was good practice. He who, with handcuffs on his hands and snow-shoes on his feet, can run one hundred yards in nine seconds, may be counted on to make good time when stripped for action. He who, in the hustlings and justlings of the "rush" night, can preserve his equanimity and deportment, thereby gives infinite promise to what flights of majesty and presence he may soar with a little practice and a little quiet. The Seniors, and especially the Senior Y men (O terque beati!), on that particular night,—it was the sober month of September—were sublime. (Sing, O ye Muses nine!).

Four consecutive class meetings yet loomed on the horizon to break the even tenor of Senioric ease and calm. Yet they can scarcely be said to have broken anything. For so devoted were the individual members of the Class to that placid detachment, which is thought to be the distinguishing feature of the fourth of our college years, that only in small numbers could they be prevailed upon to attend. From the election of the Senior Council—that limited body of dignitaries, or, as some prefer, that body of limited dignitaries—to that of the Senior Promenade Committee—a group of humanitarians charged with the supervision of dress clothes in June—most of the Seniors voted vicariously from their firesides.

Meanwhile the fountains of culture and of mirth—we mean the Lit. and the Record respectively—plied their trade with more than usual fervor. People have been seen to laugh while reading the Record this year; and Freshmen are observed to wear an unusually puzzled look on the days when the Lit. is issued.

In the early days of November, whispers began to circulate that the Senior Class was becoming too solemn. O cruel accusation! Scarce was the rumor authenticated when a public refutation of the charge was deemed necessary. The day of the Brown football game was selected, and the anxious public was refreshed by the spectacle of some thirty Seniors, variously disguised as ballet dancers, inebriated courtiers, policemen, royal personages, plumbers, etc., presenting a realistic and graphic reproduction of the recent Portuguese riots. The public was satisfied; the defamatory whispers were checked; and the Senior Class resumed its sway, thenceforth above reproach.

In a somewhat trifling survey of the incidentals and common-places of Senior year, the introducing of anything remarkable or significant seems out of place. Yet the performance of the Football Team cannot be overlooked. Here we are forced to depart for a moment from the realm of trifles and tatters and to approach the unusual. The Team of 1910 outran all expectation. In one week a crippled and defeated team was developed into a formidable engine that won from Princeton, 5—3. In one week more, that extraordinary eleven was welded into a tower of strength which held Harvard, 0—0. Six Seniors played on this Team, Captain Daly, Corey, Deming, Field, Kilpatrick, and Morris. The actual achievement, by sheer drive, of what on-lookers concede to be impossible, is an unusual spectacle. Those who had eyes to see will not easily forget it.

But, O Calliope, inspired Muse of epic ebullitions, once more take up the thread of the memorable deeds of ordinary men.

Not a few members of the Senior Class swept the far West with the musical clubs. Not a few aided the Dramatic Association in educating the citizens of the eastern marts of culture. To the latter organization, as in previous years, and, we trust, as in future years as well, all credit is due for acting like professionals and for eating and drinking like amateurs.

The Junior Promenade is, strictly speaking, a Junior event. Yet the Seniors were there! And those who understand such matters have pronounced that their white waistcoats were whiter, that their gambits and caracoles were more dexterous, that their sallies were more apt and their innuendoes more subtle, than those of the members of any other class there represented. Haec olim meminisse invabit.

So, through slush and sleet, mist and mud, the New Haven winter rolled bravely onward. Sic voluntur Parcae. The fires burned snugly in Vanderbilt Hall, the glasses clinked merrily at Mory's (fond memories!), and old age drew on in a manner by no means uncomfortable or disagreeable. Presently it began to rain a little less frequently, the grass began to grow, and attention began to center on tops and roller skates, with occasional side-glances toward Baseball, Track and Crew.

Commencement drew near. But we were not afraid. For we had heard that many receive diplomas because they deserve them, and the rest for fear they will return another year.

The Class History was delivered by Hewitt, the Oration by Hincks, and the Poem by Beer. And a peaceful farewell was signaled by a few parting puffs at the Class Pipe.

SENIOR PROMENADE COMMITTEE

From the dewy morn of Freshman youth to the pensive eve of Senioric wisdom (the words "dewy" and "pensive" being used as euphemisms), all have learned to feel and remember the flourishing vitality and gay momentum with which every chink and crevice in Yale life is filled. The conventional gloom of graduation has vanished or has never existed at all. The fine impetus of Freshman year has been sobered and reenforced. The lights burn clearer and brighter. And we move out, keener than when we entered. "Once more on my adventure, brave and new."

OBITUARY

RALPH ELLIOTT COLEMAN was born at Cornwall, Pa., on February 26th, 1888. His father is Robert Habersham Coleman of New York City. His mother was Edith Elliott Johnstone of South Carolina. Robert Coleman, an elder brother, was a member of of the Class of 1906 S.

Coleman prepared at St. Mark's School. His career at Yale was marked by the extraordinary number of friends he gained; and the news of his sudden and unhappy death on August 21st, 1910, was received by all with the profoundest grief. Those who were so fortunate as to know him even slightly were instinctively drawn to him by his inexhaustible fund of good-humor and by the warmth of his good-will. His mind was signally brilliant, and his courage and energy, attested by innumerable incidents in his college career, were unmistakable. His death has left a gap in our ranks that nothing can fill. Lovable, whimsical, intrepid old Ralph—his image will remain in our hearts forever.

EDGAR MONTILLION WOOLLEY.

BRITT MACCONNELL was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, November 30th, 1888, and died at Saranac Lake, N. Y., on September 10, 1909.

Thompson at 238 York Street. In his one year at New Haven, Britt soon came into prominence, winning everyone's love and affection, so that the news of his sickness at the opening of Sophomore year, followed by his untimely death a year later, was deeply and sincerely felt throughout the class. Britt's rare good-nature, his perseverance, and devotion to his friends combined those characteristics which made him beloved by all, and gave promise of a most brilliant future. In his death, the Class lost one of its most to be desired members, and his many personal associates as sincere and thoughtful a friend as can be had.

ROBERT A. GIBNEY.

GEORGE RAY NETTLETON was born in Milford, Connecticut, April 14, 1886.

He prepared for Yale at the Hopkins Grammar School. During the spring term of Sophomore year he was compelled to leave college on account of ill health and he died June 18, 1909.

Ray Nettleton was a man whose friendship meant much to those who knew him well. Though he was in college only a year and a half, he will be remembered as an example of a real friend and gentleman. His sincerity and nobility of character were evident to all who met him, and those of us who knew him intimately appreciated still more his uprightness and worth.

STATISTICAL

The Class of 1911 consists of 308 graduating members, 46 non-graduates, and innumerable others scattered through many subsequent classes, making a total enrollment of 380.

The Class has lost three members by death.

The following table puts our average man on a basis of comparison with those of other classes.

	Age			Height		Weight	Yearly Expenditure
	23 yrs.	0 mo.	20 days	5 ft.	9 in.	150 1-4 lbs.	$1067.00
1905	23	10	6	5	9 1-2	148 3-4	1037.00
1906	22	1	2	5	9 1-2	149 1-2	—
1907	23	8	24	5	6 1-8	147 1-5	1153.00
1908	22	9	13	5	9 1-2	147 3-5	1083.00
1909	22	8	13	5	9 1-2	150 4-5	1194.00
1910	22	7	12	5	8	146 1-2	1097.00

In age we range from Fisher, 19 years, 6 months, 22 days, up to Gemmer, 34 years, 9 months, 24 days; in height, from E. G. Clark, 5 feet 2½ inches, to J. T. Rowland, 6 feet, 2 inches; in weight from E. G. Clark, 110 lbs., to Kilpatrick, 198 lbs.

In Freshman year the average expenditure was, $1,022; in Sophomore year, $1,084; in Junior year, $1,125; in Senior year, $1,158. For the Class of 1910 the figures were: $1,052; $1,140; $1,245 and $1,339.

On a basis of 284 answers, 158 use intoxicants, while 123 either flatly deny it, or refuse to commit themselves. One hundred and eight men wear glasses, of whom 21 have been afflicted since entering college; 173 use tobacco, while 52 stoutly maintain that they have never boarded at Commons. Out of 262, 95 have been abroad.

The church members, of whom there are 235, are divided as follows: Episcopalians, 70; Congregationalists, 50; Presbyterians, 45; Baptists, 23; Roman Catholics, 14; Jews, 13; Methodists, 10; other demoninations, 10. Nevertheless, there were 150 against Sunday chapel, the class being evenly divided as to whether Battell or Woolsey was preferable. All except 29 men think daily chapel a good thing.

The question of politics showed that there were 145 Republicans, 46 Independents, 44 Democrats, 14 Insurgents, 2 Royalists, 2 Socialists, 2 Nihilists, and only one man in favor of Prohibition.

The value of the various elements of Yale life in the eyes of the average man is as follows: curriculum activities, 31 per cent.; association with men, 29 per cent.; Yale atmosphere (not New Haven climate), 15 per cent.; reading and literary, 14 per cent.; other sources, 8 per cent.

If given their choice of a Lit. triangle, a Φ BK key, a "Y", and a News badge, 170 men would take the Φ BK key, 85 the "Y", 17 the News badge and 7 the Lit. triangle. The average man is acquainted with all except 34 men in his class.

The average family from which we come contains 3.57 children, the largest family being composed of 12, while there are 38 of our number who are the only children of their parents.
